PRESENTATION & ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION

Tectonic Leadership A Roadmap to Systemic Change

Brenda Naomi Rosenberg: Former global fashion executive and peace/human rights activist. Vice president of the AJC Detroit and recipient of 16 awards for her leadership role and bridge-building efforts.

Samia Moustapha Bahsoun: Global telecom executive and political/human rights activist. Judge and coach for the MIT Enterprise Forum—Pan Arab region and recipient of the 2013 David Sarnoff award for advocacy.

Tectonic Leadership was developed by Brenda Naomi Rosenberg, an American Jewish woman, and Samia Moustapha Bahsoun, a Lebanese American woman of Muslim descent, based on the challenges they faced over a five-year period addressing the Middle East Conflict, the Holocaust, and other contentious issues.

Meet Brenda and Samia and learn how Tectonic Leadership trains people from opposite sides of conflict to take joint ownership in transforming the conversation to face challenges and find solutions together. Discover how you can use Tectonic Leadership to transform conflict in your personal life, on campus, in the work place, and in your community.

- ADMISSION: Free
- RECEPTION: Light refreshments at Roundtable Discussion

ON VIEW February 13 to May 11

PHOTOGRAPHIC EXHIBIT

Besa: A Code of Honor

Muslim Albanians Who Rescued Jews
During the Holocaust

The Albanian concept of besa is an honor code that pledges all Albanians to offer safe harbor to refugees, even at great risk to themselves. During the Holocaust,

Albanians – 70% of whom were Muslim – saved more than 2,000 Jews, welcoming them as guests and providing food, shelter, and even alternate identities.

- ADMISSION: Free with museum admission
